Jury Exclusion Law

English and manual language Friday.

First to Adopt

Mrs. Eckstein is employed in the teleprocessing department at Arkansas Blue Cross-Blue Shield. She and her husband have a two-year-old son. She said she and her husband were the first deaf couple in the state permitted to adopt a child.

At one point Friday, Hall read to Mrs. Eckstein a lengthy jury instruction on the law applicable to conspiracy, one of the more complicated instructions jurors ever received. After she responded to one of his questions about the instruction, Fussell objected that Hall was being "grossly unfair" in selecting such a complicated instruction and threatened to call a hearing person to the stand to question him on his ability to understand the same instruction.

Hall then said he would like to have Mrs. Eckstein on a conspiracy jury because he thought she understood the instruction better than he.
